Title of the project: "LOSS Narratives of Loss: Unravelling the Origins of Support for Socially Conservative Political Agendas. Horizon 2020 Call: ERC-2019-COG. Grant Agreement n. 864687".

Professor of referral: prof.ssa Catherine NETJES (DE VRIES)

Research Project: The key aim of the LOSS project is to explore the relationship between economic hardship and support for socially conservative political agendas aimed at restricting the rights of marginalised groups (ethnic linguistic and religious minorities migrants LGBTQIA + and women) and how the context in which people reside affects this relationship. The LOSS project contends that experiences of economic hardship translate into specific narratives of loss that in turn trigger support for social conservative political agendas. To empirically examine the importance of narratives of loss the LOSS project employs an innovative multi-method empirical approach combining qualitative and quantitative research methodologies. To uncover the role of context the project compares five European countries (Italy, Germany, the Netherlands, Sweden, and the United Kingdom) and local contexts within these countries.

Job Description: The DONDENA Research Centre at the Bocconi University is looking for a Postdoctoral Researcher to join a research team to work on an exciting new project directed by Professor Catherine E. De Vries, the Scientific coordinator, and supported by the European Research Council.

The project, titled "LOSS - Narratives of Loss: Unravelling the Origins of Support for Socially Conservative Political Agendas. GA n. 864687", examines the relationship between economic hardship and support for socially conservative political agendas in several European countries. The project divides into two core work packages. The first work package analyses the relationship using individual level panel data and merging it with contextual data across five European countries. The second work package focuses on the mechanisms explaining the relationship using both laboratory and survey experiments as well as focus groups across five European countries. The successful candidate will provide research support across the two work packages through their own skillset and interests may fit more closely into particular areas. S/he will be expected to contribute to the running of the project as well as to co-author work with the Principal Investigator.

The postholder's duties will include assisting in the panel data analysis and contextual data collection for work package 1 and the design, implementation and analysis of the laboratory and survey experiments to be conducted from work package 2. The successful candidate will hold a PhD in the field of political science, sociology, and economics or related area. Applicants should have strong affinity with (political) behavioural and political economy research, with the ability to use the statistical software R and with skills in data collection, management and analysis.
